Frequently Asked Questions

Program overview

What can I expect to learn from this fellowship? How will it help my legal career?

The Lynn Walker Huntley Social Justice Fellowship provides an early-career attorney with the opportunity to build their policy and advocacy, litigation, and research skills, with a specific focus on education equity. The fellow will also learn about the legislative process and work with key policymakers and advocates in the five southern states – Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, and Mississippi – that are a special focus of the fellowship.

What will the fellow focus on?

The current work of the fellowship centers on advancing educational equity, with a primary focus on strengthening public education by opposing school privatization and supporting school desegregation efforts. Refinements may be made in response to organizational needs and real-world developments.

How is the litigation work of the fellowship structured?

The fellow participates in impact litigation under the mentorship of the legal teams at Brown's Promise, a project sponsored by SEF, and the Southern Poverty Law Center (SPLC). The fellow regularly attends Brown's Promise and SPLC strategy calls and departmental meetings, and staff attorneys supervise the fellow's litigation work. Constitutional challenges to school voucher programs, school desegregation, and digital equity are the current focus areas of the 2026-2028 fellow.

Eligibility and Application

Who is eligible to apply?

The fellowship is open to third-year law students and those who graduated in or after 2024 who have a grade-point average of 3.0 or higher. Candidates with lower grade-point averages who otherwise have exceedingly strong applications may be granted consideration on a case-by-case basis.

Does the fellow have to pass the Georgia bar exam?

While passing the bar exam is required for eligibility, candidates are not required to pass the Georgia bar specifically. The fellow must pass the bar exam in any of the 17 states in SEF's region. The 17-state region includes Alabama, Arkansas, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, Missouri, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, and West Virginia.

What format should I use for my application's supporting documents that I send?

Your resume, law school transcripts, writing sample, and letters of recommendation should be uploaded in one pdf as part of the application process once you select the "Apply Now" button.

Other than law professors, who can provide letters of recommendation?

Other individuals who may serve as references include previous employers, previous supervisors at volunteer, fellowship, or internship programs, as well as practicing attorneys and judges. An applicant's law professor must write at least one letter of recommendation.
